Jack Thunder said, "They decided the navigator didn't know how to navigate because he got seasick."

Chapter 4 – E. Rail Town

Hai explained, "They'll be rowing for E. Rail town. That means we are getting close. We need to go inland so we can avoid the town."

The beach came to an end where a big rock the size of a two-story house sat partway on the land and partway in the water.

Trudy was puzzled. "I thought it was E. Rail Town? That is not what the sign says."

"They have camped just outside of town, sir," reported the black gull.

Captain Cuspidor

Chapter 4 – E. Rail Town

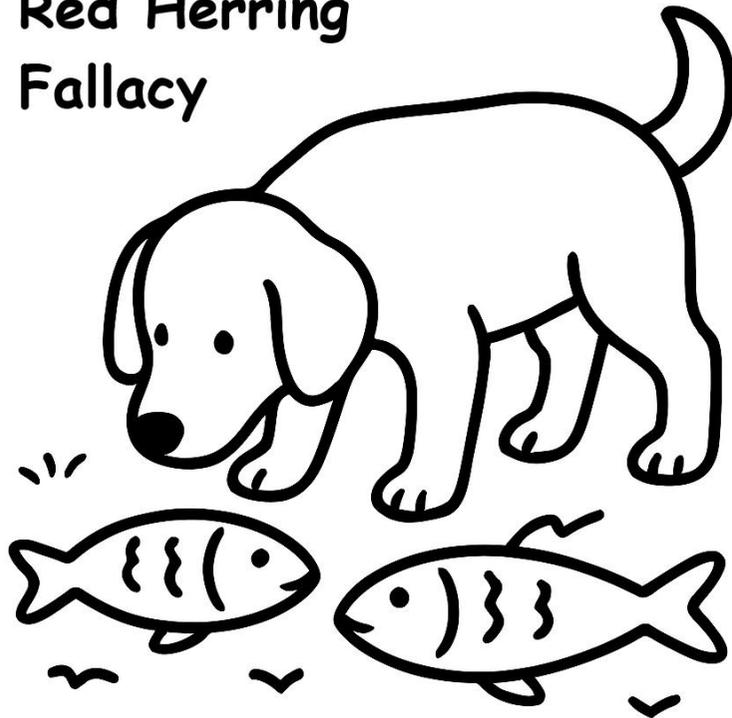

The only remarkable thing that Trudy and Jay noticed was that many of the houses had scarecrows in their front yard.

Chapter 4 – E. Rail Town

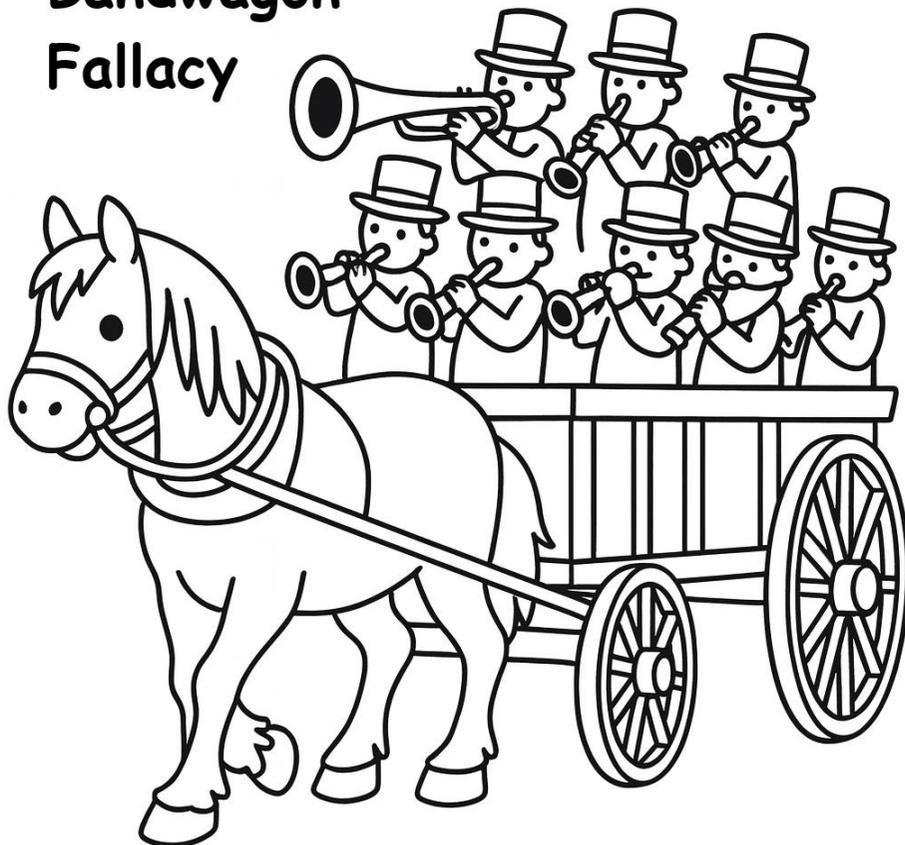

On the platform sat a fat blue dragon. The foul odor of rotting fish that filled the air seemed to be coming from the dragon himself.

Match each of the fallacies illustrated on these two pages with one of the Blue Dragon lies below:

_____ Fallacy

The Mayor of E. Rail Town

The Blue Dragon and all his dragon soldiers vanished as they became an explosion of water.

Passie said, "The black gull just flew into the forest. I have a very bad feeling about him."

Chapter 6 – The Lair of the Blue Dragon

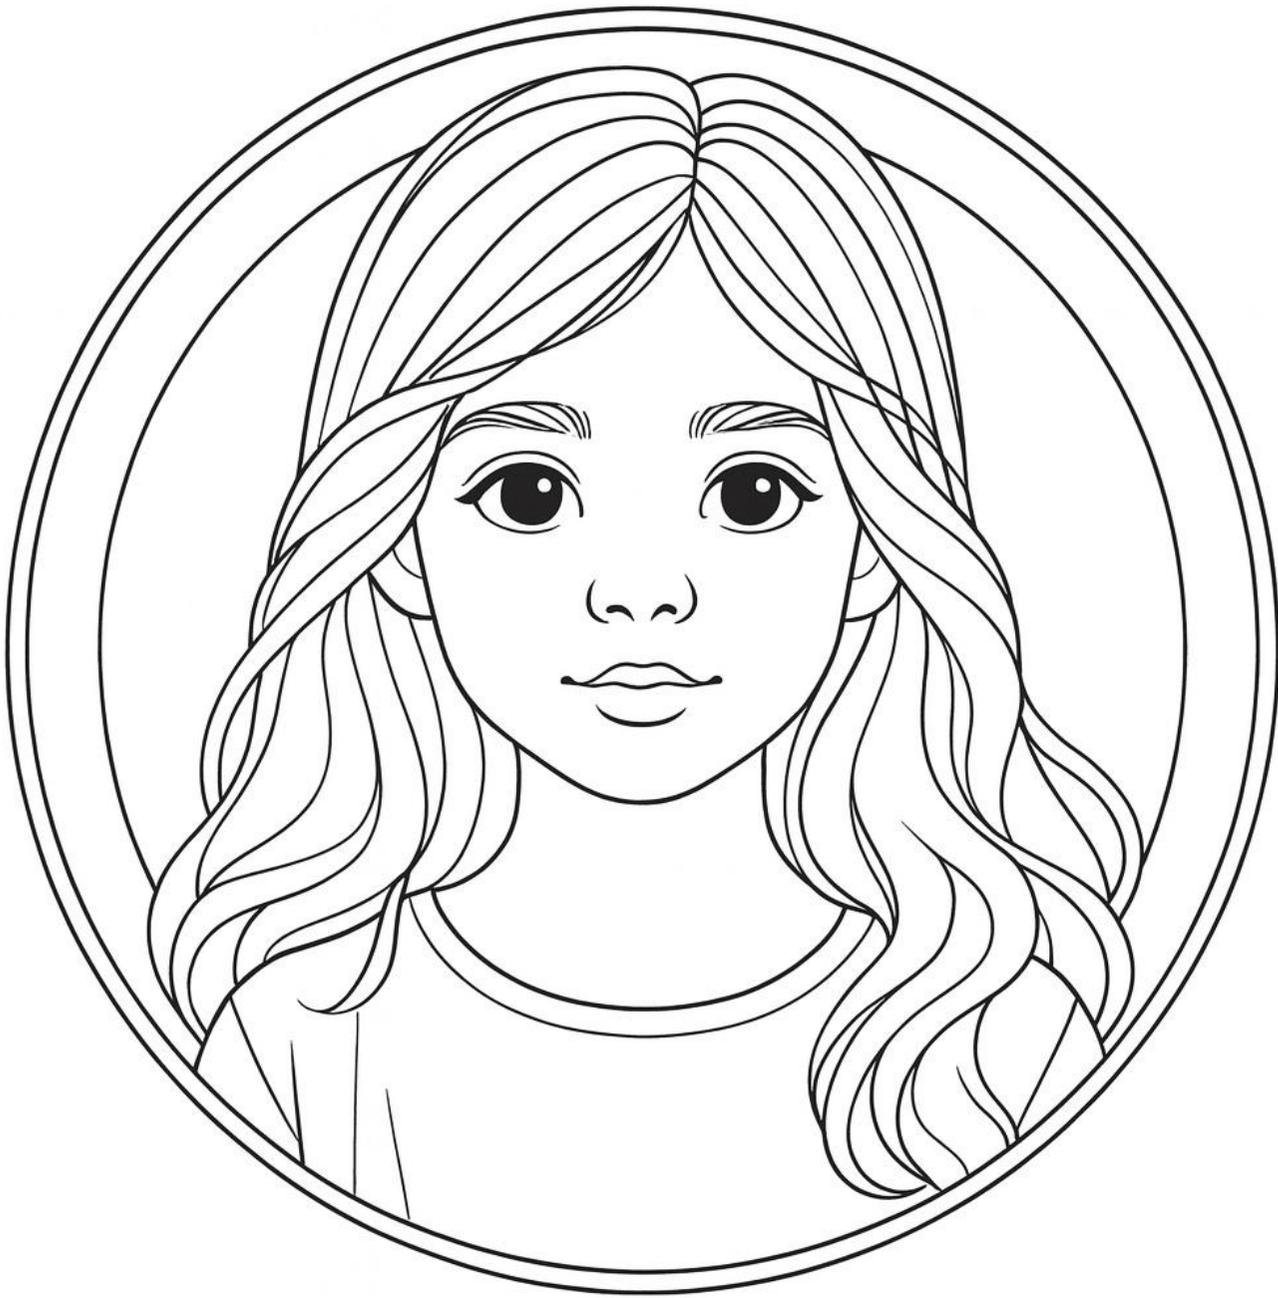

The cave was not large. Light from outside shone all the way to the back.

Chapter 6 – The Lair of the Blue Dragon

Jay announced, "We need to make better plans."

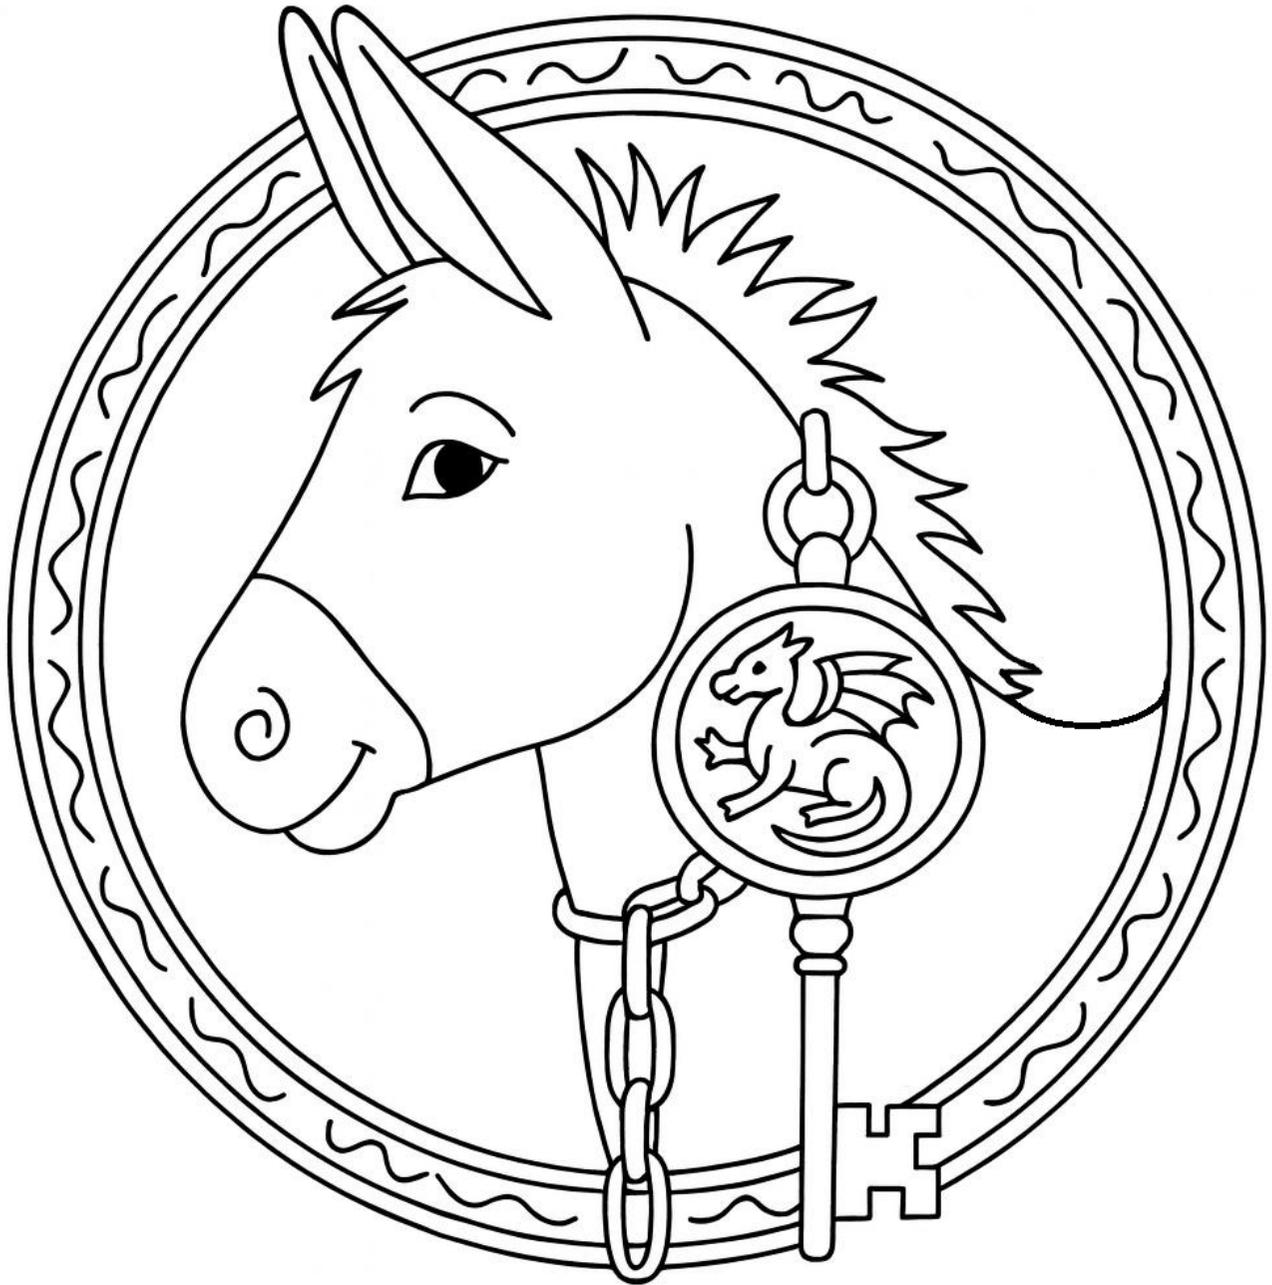

Trudy nodded her head, "I agree."

Hai's tail twitched. "Why? What is wrong with my plans? They are working, aren't they?"

Passie intervened to stop the argument, saying, "It is time for lunch."

Lug quoted from the prophecy scroll,
"By Truth and Justice it will be,
the West of Low Check is set free."
